INDEX OF INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION

January 1978 : moderate recovery in industrial production

According to initial estimates by EUROSTAT the index of industrial production in the European Community was 117.2 (1970=100) for the month of January 1978, before adjustment for seasonal variations.

The seasonally-adjusted index was 117.9, a rise of almost 2 % as compared with December 1977. This increase in production occurred in different degrees in all the Community countries, except in The Netherlands.

Production did not, however, increase in the same type of branch in the various countries. Production in the capital goods industries, for example, increased by 3 % in January for the Community as a whole, largely because of the rise in German (+ 5 %) and Italian (+ 12 %) production. Output of intermediate products rose slightly for the Community, the major increases being in France (+ 3 %) and the United Kingdom (+ 2 %). Production of consumer goods remained stable at Community level, an increase of 4 % in Italy being compensated for by decreases of 6 % in The Netherlands and 3 % in Belgium.

TURNOVER – EMPLOYMENT

For a dozen major branches, EUROSTAT is publishing data for the first time relating to short-term economic indicators for industry other than industrial production, viz. indices of turnover at current prices and of number of employees (1975=100).

Although the data are still incomplete or unavailable for certain countries, EUROSTAT took the view that their publication would provide a short-term means of filling an information gap and that certain trends could already be discerned for the purposes of economic analysis.

At a later date EUROSTAT will publish a note on methodology which will permit more accurate evaluation of the significance of the data published. With the active cooperation of the Statistical Offices of the Member States, EUROSTAT hopes in the coming months to ensure that the industrial indicators which it publishes are more comprehensive and up to date.
